Churchill Backing Bevin Plan For New Federation

Wartime British Chieftain Urges Settlement 'Before Too Late'

LONDON, Jan. 23 — Britain's wartime prime minister, Winston Churchill, threw the entire support of the Conservative party behind the Bevin plan for a Western European confederation today but urged a settlement with Russia "before it is too late."

On the second day of a history-making foreign affairs debate in the House of Commons, Churchill seconded Foreign Secretary Bevin's attack on Soviet expansionism and international "sabotage."

But he pleaded for understanding between East and West to forestall another war.

Churchill said: "There are very grave dangers of letting everything pile up until something happens."

"I believe it right to say that the best chance of avoiding war is in accord with other Western democracies to bring matters to a head with the Soviets and by formal and diplomatic processes to arrive at a lasting settlement.

"EVEN THIS measure would not guarantee that war would not come but I believe it would give the best chance of preventing it and if it came we would have the best chance of coming out of it alive."

Stressing the dangers of the present impasse, Churchill asked:

"Can you doubt the gravity of the times when the word 'sabotage' is used by Marshall (U. S. Secretary of State George Marshall) and the word 'sabotage' is used by the Soviet Union?"

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 — The United States "heartily welcomed" today the proposal for a federation of leading Western European states to halt Russian expansion. Official position of the United States was made known by the State department. Its statement said the proposal looks to a "closer material and spiritual link between the Western European nations."

shall) and Bevin in accusation against a great power? Such a thing in any previous period would have been incompatible with maintenance of diplomatic relations in any form.

"The Soviet Union hasn't used its overwhelming military power in Europe to march westward to the North Sea, the English Channel and the Atlantic ocean. Nevertheless, the situation has deteriorated, especially during the last six months."

"Who can believe there will ever be a permanent peace in Europe when there is fighting in Greece to see whether a line should run around Athens to the Dardanelles and Turkey?"

Churchill added that danger points exist also in China and the Middle East.

A HUSHED audience which included Princess Elizabeth heard his statement, which was interrupted several times by the two Communist members of parliament.

French Expecting U. S. Aid

PARIS, Jan. 23 — Authoritative diplomatic sources in Paris revealed today that the United States definitely is expected to cooperate closely with Britain and France in working out details for setting up a Western European defense plan.

These sources said that when British Foreign Secretary Bevin made his historic declaration in London yesterday concerning formation of a grand military alliance of Western European powers, he did so with assurances of American support.

Plans for close American cooperation reportedly have reached a point where consultations between American military planners on the one hand and the French and British on the other may soon be held at general staff level.

Consultations between French and British military leaders already are underway in London, where Gen. Revers, chief of staff of the French army, has been for the past week.

REPORTS are current in French military circles that shortly after the return of Gen. Revers high-ranking American Army officers will arrive in (Continued on Page Two)

Kiernan's ONE MAN'S OPINION

Rep. Hartley says 12 tons of new records were flown into the country last week. Apparently Petrillo's air defenses are weak.

But I hear that he has ordered out a detachment of harpists fitted out with arrows for their strings.

Many were agreeably surprised to see Jimmy in television this week but in 3,000 homes piano practice stopped immediately when he leaned out of the screen and shook his finger.

Meanwhile Jimmy is eyeing Mr. Truman as a potential member of his union and for once Taft and Hartley didn't chorus "he doesn't have to join if he doesn't want to."

They will defend to the last comma the right of a citizen to play free enterprise piano but he must not be the Democratic presidential candidate or he's on his own.

Food Strike Stalls Work In Germany

FRANKFURT, Jan. 23 — The greatest general strike in Germany since pre-Hitler days was staged today when an estimated 2,000,000 workers in Bavaria stayed away from their jobs in protest against low food rations.

The 24-hour walkout by union labor in Bavaria, in the United States occupation zone, brought the total of idle workers in both the American and British occupation zones to 2,250,000.

In Florence, Italy, labor leaders ordered a general strike beginning at midnight in protest against the "undemocratic compartment of police" during a worker demonstration yesterday.

Members of the Bavarian cabinet met until late in the night in an emergency session but failed to check the determination of workers to walk off the job.

UNION leaders warned the government that if negotiations with the cabinet failed to alleviate the food situation the so-called "hunger strike" might be prolonged.

First effects of the strike were felt when street car and railway employees quit work as scheduled at midnight.

Trains and military transport were at a standstill throughout Bavaria.

Workers by the thousands previously quit their jobs in other areas of Germany, including Wiesbaden, capital of the state Greater Hesse, and in the industrial Ruhr of the British occupation zone.

Miners in Gelsenkirchen and Bochum, in the Ruhr, also threatened to stage an early strike in an effort to obtain a further increase in their rations which already are higher than those received by the average German.

In decreeing the walkouts, Bavarian union leaders charged that government officials encouraged manufacturers to hoard food and to barter in industrial consumer goods.

A RESOLUTION adopted by the CIO executive board, after a bitter fight between right and left-wing elements, said:

"We believe it is politically unwise to inject a third party into the political scene in 1948. We believe that our support of (Continued on Page Two)

Pope Hears Pole

ROME, Jan. 23 — Pope Pius today received Poland's Cardinal Hlond in private audience and heard a full report on the situation in Poland.

In addition the pact is said to provide for all forms of mutual assistance, including economic, financial and industrial aid.

Spain, Argentina Said In Accord

MADRID, Jan. 23 — Reliable quarters in Madrid said today that the draft of a military pact between Spain and Argentina has been approved in principle.

The accord is said to involve full coordination of each nation's armed forces in case either signatory is threatened.

Leaders of the war veterans Republican clubs complained they were not properly "recognized" in the selection of delegates to the national convention in Philadelphia next June.

The war veterans wanted one of three things:

1. A veteran as "second choice."

2. Appointment of State Sen. Kyle Brooks, Cincinnati, state president of the groups, as a delegate-at-large instead of an alternate-at-large, or

Brrrrr; Rather Chilly, Isn't It? 2 More Days Of It Coming

Ohioans will have to struggle through two more days of the current cold wave before any relief is forthcoming.

The U. S. weather bureau reported today that a frigid air mass from Canada is sweeping southward through North Dakota and then eastward.

Temperatures dropped to below zero in several cities yesterday as the second cold spell to hit Ohio in a week held a tight grip on the state.

In Circleville, the mercury skidded downward to Winter's lowest low—six below zero. That reading was taken at 4 a. m. Friday. By noon, the temperature had climbed up to about 10 above.

With the new frigid wave came a statement from the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. declaring a second public emergency in the use of its fuel.

A SINCERE appeal was made by the gas company to all people to be sparing in the use of gas.

Gas service has been curtailed fully to all industries using more than 25,000 cubic feet of gas per day. Curtailment of 187 Central Ohio industries releases 65,000,000 cubic feet per day additional for homes.

All commercial users of gas, such as stores, hotels, business buildings, restaurants and bakeries, are being asked to reduce their requirements as much as possible.

Weather forecast indicates that release from the cold weather may come soon, and officials of the gas company expressed hope they might remove some restriction on the use of gas then.

In the meantime, the company is drawing on its propane plants, reserve wells, and storage wells in the effort to meet the great demand.

"If each of our customers will help by saving a little gas, the accumulated saving will be a tremendous help," Dan McClain, Circleville manager, said.

Circleville coal company officials took looks into their storage bins Friday morning and found the supply none too good. None of them reported having ample stocks. None expected delivery of West Virginia coal in the near future. One said he had plenty of Ohio strip mine fuel. The situation was an unpleasant one—especially for persons who were caught Friday with empty bins.

Forecasters said a southerly wind could be expected to ease temperature about Sunday afternoon after the cold mass travels through the state toward the Atlantic seaboard.

CURTAILMENT of gas to Ohio consumers was kept in force today as the cold brought about unprecedented use of gas by home-owners.

The cold was held responsible for a series of Ohio fires which left several families homeless and several persons overcome by smoke.

A family of five was routed and four persons overcome by smoke in Cincinnati while an aged woman and her granddaughter were overcome by smoke when fire wrecked their Cuyahoga Falls home.

A widow and her four children fled their burning home in Youngstown and five persons were chased into the sub-freezing weather by a $20,000 fire at Lorain.

Veto Threat Brings Move To Trim GOP Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 — A movement developed in Congress today to slash the Republican tax reduction bill $2 billion or more in the wake of President Truman's disclosure that he will veto the measure.

The strategy behind the move, under discussion in the senate, would be to make the bill more acceptable to Democratic senators who might otherwise vote to sustain a presidential veto.

Rep. Knutson (R) Minn., the bill's sponsor, now estimates that the tax cut provided by his measure would run between $6 billion and $6.3 billion, instead of the $5.6 billion previously estimated for the 1948 calendar year.

The proposal being discussed in the senate is to reduce the cut to $4 billion, the same as was provided in the two previous Knutson bills which the Republican Congress adopted last year. The President vetoed both measures and the senate sustained the chief executive on the senate bill.

REPUBLICAN leaders are confident that the house, which is expected to pass the Knutson bill without change around Feb. 2, will override a veto, while administration leaders are banking on the senate to sustain the President again. Mr. Truman made his position known at a news conference yesterday.

Knutson expressed confidence both houses would override a veto and predicted his bill will become law "not later than March 15."

The house and senate GOP leadership has set as its goal a minimum cut of $3 billion in the President's $37.7 billion budget for fiscal 1949.

They contend that this will leave between $2.5 billion and $3.5 billion for debt retirement in the next fiscal year, which begins July 1, even if the Knutson bill becomes law in its present form.

Administration spokesmen contend, however, that if the Knutson bill becomes law, it will cause a $2.1 billion deficit in the next fiscal year.

Gen. Ike Makes It Clear: He Refuses To Run

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower told the nation today that he would "refuse the presidential nomination even if offered."

Eisenhower flatly and firmly declared that "he is not available for and could not accept nomination to high political office."

The Army chief of staff, heretofore regarded politically as one of the most formidable dark horse candidates in the nation's history, issued a statement making it crystal clear that he does not choose to run.

The Army, in making the statement public, observed:

"It is released to the press because Gen. Eisenhower hopes through this means to inform every interested person or group that he is not in politics and that he would refuse nomination even if offered."

EISENHOWER'S statement was made in a letter to Leonard V. Finder, publisher of The Manchester (N. H.) Union Leader.

The retiring Army chief's assertion that he would refuse a presidential nomination came as the "Draft Ike" boom gained momentum throughout the country.

Specifically, it answered Finder's question as to Eisenhower's views on the entry of his name in the New Hampshire primaries.

The general's letter said: "Months ago I thought that unqualified denial of political ambition would eliminate me from consideration in the coming campaign for the presidency, because the office has, since the days of Washington, historically (Continued on Page Two)

U. S. Plane Held By Poles, Claim

LONDON, Jan. 23 — The London Daily Express reported today that the Polish government is holding an American plane and its five-man crew.

The newspaper carried a dispatch from Warsaw which related that the Americans flew to Poland to take an injured American soldier to a Berlin hospital. It said that Polish authorities declared their landing papers were not in order and placed them under guard.

Stassen Clash Is Delayed

Table-Pounding Parley Gets Warm

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 — Edwin W. Pauley leaped from his seat at the senate commodity speculation hearing today and demanded that he be allowed to confront Harold E. Stassen "face to face with his falsehoods."

Pauley shouted that he had been promised the opportunity to "face this man."

Stassen, GOP presidential aspirant and the man who accused Pauley of profiting in the commodity markets through "inside information," was in the witness chair as Pauley's dramatic outburst came.

Sen. Ferguson (R) Mich., chairman of the investigating subcommittee, touched off the scene when he announced that Pauley would not take the witness stand today.

Ferguson explained that the committee still lacks reports from Secretary of Agriculture Anderson on trading in hides.

PAULEY, after asking, "May I interrupt?" thundered:

"Did I understand that you will not proceed with my hearing today?"

"I had an exchange of telegrams in which there was an agreement that I should face this man today—face to face with his falsehoods."

Ferguson rasped that the agreement was only that Pauley might submit in writing questions for the committee to put to Stassen. This recalled the celebrated battle between Ferguson and Howard Hughes over the right of assailed witnesses to cross-examine.

Pauley attempted to read a telegram but was overruled by Ferguson.

The millionaire Californian then went into conference with his aides.

The clash came as 80-year-old Sen. Green (D) R. I., accused Stassen of having nothing but "anonymous" reports as a basis for asserting that government officials have made huge profits by food gambling on "inside information."

At one point, Stassen retorted:

"IF YOU want to call this a fishing expedition you may, Senator, but every time you've dropped your line where I told you, you should have brought up something."

Stassen clashed bitterly with Sen. Green at the outset of the Senate "showdown."

Mystery Illness Hits Stage Star

COLUMBUS, Jan. 23 — Film and Stage Star Kay Francis was reported in "fair" condition today in a local hospital, where she was rushed last night under mysterious circumstances.

The nature of the star's illness or injury could not be learned immediately. Columbus detectives reported that they were holding Howard Graham, Miss Francis' manager, for investigation. They did not reveal in what connection he was being questioned.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—The CIO today coyly withheld its ultimate endorsement of President Truman for reelection while repudiating the third-party candidacy of Henry A. Wallace.

CIO President Phillip Murray's announcement that his organization is "in no way committed to any presidential aspirant" was interpreted as a strategic maneuver to gain bargaining power in the drafting of the 1948 Democratic platform.

After the nominating conventions of next Summer, however, Murray is expected to swing his organization solidly behind the administration which has espoused the CIO program of price control, rationing, a higher minimum wage and broadened social security.

In the meantime, the CIO has put itself on record as opposed to the Wallace movement.

GOP War Vets Resent Failure To Get Notice

COLUMBUS, Jan. 23—Republican war veterans are to express their smoldering resentment over alleged failure of the party big-wigs in the drafting of Taft presidential campaign plans when they meet in Columbus Sunday.

Leaders of the war veterans Republican clubs complain they were not properly "recognized" in the selection of delegates to the national convention in Philadelphia next June.

Brothers Hear Judge Read Terms

Sentence of one to 20 years in the Ohio penitentiary was handed to Joseph Leach, 25, of Circleville, and his brother, Russell, 20, was placed on five years probation when they appeared Friday before Judge William Radcliff in Pickaway County common pleas court.

Both men were indicted for forgery by the January session of grand jury. They were charged with passing two $35 bad checks at a local garage and filling station in December.

For Russell this was his first offense. Joseph previously had served time in the Mansfield reformatory for car theft and an earlier count on forgery, records in the sheriff's office reveal.

Two others, both first offenders, who pleaded guilty Wednesday when arraigned before Judge Radcliff were given two-year probation sentences.

EARL GARNER was placed on probation for house breaking and stealing $150 worth of clothes and Paul Weaver received two years probation after admitting two counts of grand larceny.

Trial dates have tentatively been set to begin Feb. 5, for four others who pleaded innocent after grand jury indictment.

Charles Reed and Delmer Weaver Jr., will be tried in common pleas court on three counts of grand larceny each; George Valentine will face grand larceny on one count and Carrol Chaffin is to be tried for non-support of his six-year-old son, Carrol Jr.

No hearing date has been set for James E. Brown, 40, Samson Eisner, 24, and Elmer C. Davis, 26, who were indicted for allegedly shoplifting $47 worth of goods from the Armstrong electrical appliance store in New Holland.

Ferguson explained that the committee still lacks reports from Secretary of Agriculture Anderson on trading in hides.

PAULEY, after asking, "May I interrupt?" thundered:

"Did I understand that you will not proceed with my hearing today?"

"I had an exchange of telegrams in which there was an agreement that I would face this man today—face to face with his falsehoods."

Ferguson rasped that the agreement was only that Pauley might submit in writing questions for the committee to put to Stassen. This recalled the celebrated battle between Ferguson and Howard Hughes over the right of assailed witnesses to cross-examine.

Pauley attempted to read a telegram but was overruled by Ferguson.

The millionaire Californian then went into conference with his aides.

The clash came as 80-year-old Sen. Green (D) R. I., accused Stassen of having nothing but "anonymous" reports as a basis for asserting that government officials have made huge profits by food gambling on "inside information."

At one point, Stassen retorted:

"IF YOU want to call this a fishing expedition you may, Senator, but every time you've dropped your line where I told you, you should have brought up something."

Mystery Illness Hits Stage Star

COLUMBUS, Jan. 23—Film and Stage Star Kay Francis was reported in "fair" condition today in a local hospital, where she was rushed last night under mysterious circumstances.

The nature of the star's illness or injury could not be learned immediately. Columbus detectives reported that they were holding Howard Graham, Miss Francis' manager, for investigation. They did not reveal in what connection he was being questioned.

Training Clinics

Four national polio treatment and training centers have been established through March of Dimes funds contributed to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Located in Denver, Boston, Los Angeles and New York City, these centers serve not only as training points for doctors, nurses and physical therapists, but also as model treatment and clinical units where infantile paralysis patients can obtain the best medical care possible under ideal conditions.

began his statement. The senator snapped:
"We're asking the questions. And when we ask questions we expect answers."

The controversy arose in connection with Stassen's charges concerning records of Pauley's commodity trading.

Stassen said he had asked permission for his "experts" to examine the government records. He added:

"I believe the President of the United States should be respectfully called upon to direct all departments of the government to promptly turn over to the committee all records of excessive speculation."

THE WITNESS made the statement after Green asked whether Stassen had given the senate appropriations committee any "further leads" on his charges that administration "insiders" profited through speculation.

Pauley, who has accused Stassen of using "inside information" obtained from political records to further his political ambitions, sat at another table across the room as Stassen testified.

An undercover subcommittee split flared into the open almost the moment the hearing started.

Sen. Tydings (D) Md., voiced "a strong protest to this committee's conduct" when it was revealed that a telegram from Stassen had not been disclosed to Tydings and Green.

In the telegram, Stassen asked that "my accountant examiner be permitted to make a detailed analysis of the records of the trading of Mr. Pauley and Mr. (Ralph K.) Davies before my next appearance."

Stassen also recommended a study of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's records seized by the Justice department.

That, he insisted, constituted a "broad lead" as to where the subcommittee could get its information.

Lumber Company Worker Hurt

Gene Smith, 377 Town street, employee of the Barnes Lumber Company, was rushed to Berger hospital Thursday afternoon after his arm had been badly lacerated by a roller on a planing machine.

Smith had been feeding lumber to the planer, and his arm was dragged through the roller after his glove had snagged in the machine, a lumber company official said. Hospital attendants said Smith's condition was satisfactory.

Railroad Strike To Be 'Severe Blow' On Nation

CHICAGO, Jan. 23—William T. Faricy, president of the Association of American Railroads, declared today that a railroad strike or another round of wage increases would be a "severe blow" to the country as a whole.

Three railroad labor groups, the engineers, firemen and switchmen, have called a strike for Feb. 1 to enforce wage demands.

Faricy's warning against a third increase in railroad wages was given during a speech at a joint luncheon meeting of the mid-west shippers advisory board and the Traffic Club of Chicago.

The AAR president warned: "Some 60 days hence it is entirely possible the country will be facing some such crisis as that which the same engineers' brotherhood, among others, brought on in May, 1946." (A strike was called at that time.) Faricy asserted that the present railroad labor situation developed because 10 percent of the railroad employees refused to accept a 15 1/2 cents an hour increase accepted by other rail unions.

Chaffin is to face another Pickaway County judge Feb. 5—common Pleas Judge William Radcliff. Chaffin was indicted by the January grand jury for failure to provide for his six-year-old son, Carol Jr.

party he declared that the Conservative opposition "welcomes everything said by Mr. Bevin regarding more intimate relations with France and the Benelux nations (Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg), and I presume Switzerland and Italy, and gives all of its support to this policy."

Churchill started his remarks by saying that his pronouncements at Fulton, Mo., almost two years ago—when he warned the Western world to gird against Soviet expansionism—"has now become the accepted policy of the English-speaking world."

But he told Commons: "The Western democracies should seek unity among themselves at the earliest moment and take the initiative in asking the Soviets for a settlement."

To a self-posed question of "will there be war?" Churchill answered:

"I will only venture now to say that there seems to me to be a very real danger in allowing things to drift too long."

Churchill appealed to the laborite government not to attempt to make Laborite party capital out of the Western European scheme.

CHURCHILL declared that it was of greatest importance to bring anxious states and nations as a whole into larger harmony on which their future prosperity and even life itself may well depend.

He criticized the recent British decision to scrap some battleships as "unwise and imprudent."

In an aside he congratulated the United States on America's continued assistance to Greece.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 23—Township trustees were urged today to protect their rights of home rule and to fight all attempts to infringe on their authority.

Troy A. Kost, secretary-treasurer of the Township Officials of Illinois, told the annual convention of the Ohio State Association of Township Trustees and Clerks:

Countywide zoning, the latest major subject of interest to township officials, was discussed by State Rep. Charles P. Baker Jr., Lake County Republican and co-author of the zoning bill passed by the last general assembly, who told of the provisions of the new law, and by Charles E. Hatch, Toledo planning engineer.

The CIO president made no attempt to hide the split and for the first time voiced no objections to reading the roll-call of those who fought national CIO policy.

Harry Bridges, president of the longshoremen's union, who voted in support of Wallace, served notice that the left-wing group would ignore the national CIO policy statement.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 23—Township trustees were urged today to protect their rights of home rule and to fight all attempts to infringe on their authority.

Troy A. Kost, secretary-treasurer of the Township Officials of Illinois, told the annual convention of the Ohio State Association of Township Trustees and Clerks:

"You must fight hard to hold the line. It is more necessary now, perhaps than at any time in our history, to preserve home rule. We must be sure the men we elect do not forget the little men back home."

Countywide zoning, the latest major subject of interest to township officials, was discussed by State Rep. Charles P. Baker Jr., Lake County Republican and co-author of the zoning bill passed by the last general assembly, who told of the provisions of the new law, and by Charles E. Hatch, Toledo planning engineer.

Europe from Washington for private consultations.

It is no secret that the French general staff would like the United States to help equip 30 to 40 French divisions.

French military chieftains are confident that if they are assured such help they could build a strong French army which—in event of war with Russia—would be capable of holding a line in Western Europe until the United States was able to land another great army in France.

Discussions between American and French military planners are expected to center around this question of arming French forces, although no definite commitments by the United States are anticipated in the immediate future.

Eisenhower Units Are Merged

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—Merger of the Illinois "Eisenhower for President Club" with the National Draft Eisenhower League, Inc., was announced today by Stuart Scheffel, national chairman of the league.

Scheffel also announced the election of Joseph Moller, Chicago, to the board of directors of the league and his appointment as temporary state chairman of the Illinois branch.

a third party would weaken the possibility of electing a progressive Congress."

Adoption of the resolution provoked a clear-cut cleavage between the two warring factions in the CIO. The left-wing unions went down the line for Wallace but in the end they were outvoted, 33 to 11, by the Murray forces.

The CIO president made no attempt to hide the split and for the first time voiced no objections to reading the roll-call of those who fought a national CIO policy.

Harry Bridges, president of the longshoremen's union, who voted in support of Wallace, served notice that the left-wing group would ignore the national CIO policy statement.

Bridges told a news conference that he will continue to push the third party movement and predicted that "the Democrats don't have the chance of a snowball in hell of winning this election."

Wiring Break Brings Vacation

Approximately 255 students at Saltcreek township school got an unscheduled vacation at noon Thursday because of a break in the electrical wiring which runs into the cafeteria.

The power shutoff prevented dieticians from cooking food on the electric ranges for the students' noon meal. Classes resumed Friday.

Young Men Flex Muscles To Make Hit With Girls

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 23.—When the young men of today flexes his muscles and throws out his chest, it's not you he's trying to impress, brother, it's the girl beside you.

Surprised? Why, you're only third on the list of reasons for success of body-building courses. The potential employer is second.

Charles Atlas, the man who does for you what your tailor can't, says he receives thousands of letters monthly from young men who want to take his exercise courses—and most of them seek stronger muscles because of the girl they've got or the one they're after.

Atlas, crowned the "world's most perfectly developed man" (circa 1935) at Madison Square Garden, does a thriving business of developing manhood through a correspondence course on proper exercises.

HE GUARANTEES to add four or five inches to the chest, two inches in the thighs, around the forearm and biceps during the three months—"provided the pupils are conscientious."

Uncle Sam doubted his contentions once and the fair trades commission stepped in. Whether or not they dispatched a G-man to take the course is not known—but the FTC stepped out, proclaiming Atlas OK.

The "over 55" physical culturist is soaking up sunshine while vacationing at the Sovereign hotel on Miami Beach.

He says prospective pupils are very frank in their letters, and their desire to show off before the ladies is sometimes amusing, sometimes pathetic.

One lad wrote: "I met my girl this winter. My suits are nice, the shoulders well-padded, and I look like quite a guy. But I've got to do something before she sees me in a bathing suit next summer."

Atlas says there has been an increase in his business since the war, both at home and abroad.

HIS COURSES reach nearly all countries, except Russia. The latest converts to exercise are the Hindus, Atlas having a "surprising" number of pupils in India.

"Business is 'thriving even more in England' than in America and the only thing holding him back there is the shortage of paper on which to print the exercises."

Atlas' pupils range from 12 up to 90. The very young want to improve their bodies so they can "beat" their buddies, the majority (17 to 25) want to impress their girls—but he didn't say why the old boys take the course.

One of the most ambitious projects ever undertaken by Great Britain in peacetime since Victoria built the empire in part on a foundation of deserts, jungles, backwardness and poverty was in the making today.

Nominally, it is simply a confederation of Western European states as outlined by British Foreign Secretary Bevin.

But underlying the surface announcement is a breath-taking scheme of truly monumental scope, and once again Britain has shown that she is most enterprising and constructive in time of danger.

Bevin made clear that a very real danger lies in Soviet Russia's ruthless expansionism, her stubborn refusal to cooperate with the West and her imitative blustering that has recreated the atmosphere in which Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini strutted and shouted their way to doom.

HE FEELS that the Western nations are all cognizant of this danger, proposes an airtight political and economic unity among them. What is more important, he urges later participation by all the friends of democracy.

There were two interrelated factors of high significance in Bevin's historic address.

These were his admission of Italy as a common partner in the bloc on a basis of complete parity and his pointed reference to collaboration by the Middle East.

Chief opposition to such a proposal will come from Soviet Russia, but quite obviously that no longer matters nor will Russian objections to Western European measures be regarded seriously until she changes her own attitude.

By starting with Italy and the so-called Benelux nations of Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg, Britain and France are being realistic.

Belgium and Holland still have great wealth, at home and in the colonies, while Luxembourg always has been the "Fort Knox" of Europe.

Bevin's point seems to be that Russia made the breach and seeks consistently to widen it. Thus the West will have a bloc of its own. And its doors will be open to all applicants who need to do no more than park their pistols at the door.

Many of the early Greek and Roman coins bear the monograms of rulers or of the towns in which they were struck, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

TALKING to reporters in Washington, Mayor Israel Rokach, of Tel Aviv, Palestine, is shown as he urged a 10,000-man United Nations police force to keep order in the Holy Land after the British troops withdrew. He declared the British favor the Arabs who, he said, are under the direction of the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem and those "who supported the Nazis during the war." (International Soundphoto)

'Dreamers' Hit By Jones For Spending Spree

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Jesse Jones has told Congress that wartime "dreamers, reformers and pure theorists" persuaded the late President Roosevelt to authorize "unlimited" spending.

Jones, wartime chief of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, replied angrily to the General Accounting Office's criticism of the agency.

The GAO charged that RFC books were loosely kept and that it had no control over its $7 billion worth of defense plants.

The Texan, unable to leave Houston because of illness, stated his case in a letter to the senate banking and currency committee.

He called criticism of RFC "largely unjustified, intended to be self-serving, and calculated to create distrust in another government agency that had rendered a great service."

JONES SAID constructive criticism is desirable but that there always will be "soreheads who do not get what they want."

His denunciation of "dreamers, reformers and theorists" apparently was aimed at the Bureau of Economic Warfare, which, under the direction of Henry Wallace, then a key figure in the Roosevelt administration, spent huge amounts through RFC.

Jones declared: "It is not sound legislative policy to give other government agencies power to direct RFC to make loans, grants, or other expenditures."

Faster milking, according to dairy tests, helps increase milk production. The gentle, thorough action of McCormick-Deering Milkers helps your cows let down their milk faster—and give more milk. McCormick-Deering Milkers also decrease the amount of strappings and help maintain healthy udders. Take good care of your milker. Ask us for suggestions on keeping it operating efficiently.

Foremilking reduces bacteria count and is a check on the health and condition of the udder. A uniform routine for time and order of milking is important.

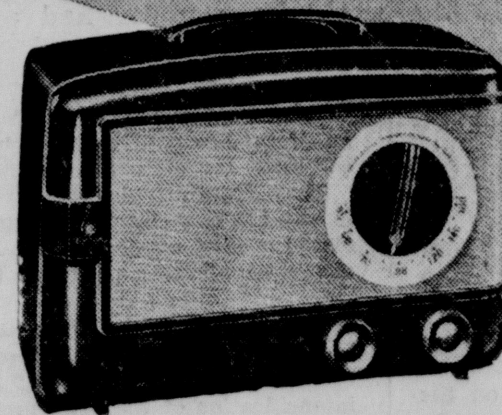

Test cups on McCormick-Deering Milkers can be put in place quickly and the cow milked out quickly (3 or 4 minutes). Strip at once after removing the milker unit.

IN COLD WEATHER SPEED COUNTS AT Milking Time

Washing with hot water (130°F.) not only promotes sanitation but stimulates the let-down action.

Faster milking, according to dairy tests, helps increase milk production. The gentle, thorough action of McCormick-Deering Milkers helps your cows let down their milk faster—and give more milk. McCormick-Deering Milkers also decrease the amount of stripplings and help maintain healthy udders. Take good care of your milker. Ask us for suggestions on keeping it operating efficiently.

Foremilking reduces bacteria count and is a check on the health and condition of the udder. A uniform routine for time and order of milking is important.

Test cups on McCormick-Deering Milkers can be put in place quickly and the cow milked out quickly (3 or 4 minutes). Strip at once after removing the milker unit.

RUSSIAN RECOVERY

RUSSIA is bragging now that she is at a pre-war level of agriculture and industry, and Americans may well congratulate her on that score. We are not much concerned about how far the Russian people go in these respects. If true, it is a good thing that they are getting back on their feet, industrially, agriculturally and otherwise, provided the Russian government doesn't decide that it's necessary to strengthen the military forces at the expense of peaceful recovery.

Americans don't exactly love the Russians, and they spurn their present totalitarian administration. Doubtless they don't love us particularly. But there is no good reason why we can't get along together without scrapping and fussing. There are some signs that the Russians feel somewhat the same way about it, even if the Politburo gang have other ideas.

The Politburo as at present constituted will not last forever. Future members are likely to have better plans for Russia—and more peaceful ones for her relations with the world. But Americans as a nation need to form a clear policy, enunciate it definitely and unmistakably, then stand by it firmly, all of us, of all political parties, with all we've got.

PALESTINE HOPE NOT NEW

The idea of a Jewish state in Palestine is not a modern invention, first formulated in the Balfour Declaration of 1917. Over 150 years ago it occurred to Prince Grigori Potemkin, adviser and secret husband of the Russian empress, Catherine II. When Russia was engaged on one of her innumerable wars with the Turks, Potemkin organized a Jewish battalion, and promised them a national home in Jerusalem when the Turkish empire was destroyed.

The catch was in this condition attached. Russia was quite willing to destroy the Turkish empire, but even when she had the strength to do so, Great Britain and various European powers interfered. So the "Sick Man of Europe," as the Turkish state came to be called, took an unconscionably long time to die; and a Jewish Palestine has had to wait till our day. It might have met fewer difficulties if it could have been brought about in Potemkin's day. For one thing, the nationalistic spirit had not then swept the earth, and the Palestinian Arabs might not have objected to a Jewish state.

Sure, people are funny. There is the friend, for instance, who will stop you right in the middle of an icy road to tell you how much more comfortable Winters are than they used to be.

"Britons Court Slavery" says a commentator. They may court it, but not accept it—Britons never, never will be slaves.

Congress Marshall Plan O.K. | Did Typo Boss Pull a Boner
May Hinge on Grecian Crisis | Using Chicago for T-H Test?

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Belief is growing in Washington that congressional action on the Marshall Plan may well hinge on the outcome of the fast-developing crisis in Greece.

Foreign policy observers think that congressional foes of the long-range European recovery program will use any adverse developments in Greece to sustain their position that the Marshall program will not achieve its aim of rescuing Europe from its post-war economic and political plight.

There is growing fear in official circles that any sizeable increase in Greek guerrilla influence will place President Truman in the dilemma of either admitting failure in the keystone of his foreign policy—using dollars to fight Communism—or being forced to send troops.

In the opinion of many observers either move might well prove fatal to the president's White House aspirations during this election year.

As the experts see the picture, Communist ascendancy in Greece would give Marshall Plan opponents the effective arguments that United States dollars for European recovery are, in effect, "Operation Rathole."

If Greek developments should swing Mr. Truman around to considering United States armed intervention, then the Henry Wallace faction, GOP non-interventionists, and even conservative elements in the Democratic party undoubtedly would view the move as a long step toward declared armed conflict. They would condemn it roundly in voices uttered separately, but with a single view.

These Days

Edward J. Flynn, of the Bronx, produced in his book, "You're the Boss," an outstanding sociological study of American life. No college professor could have written it, because no one of them could have had as intimate a view of the actual operations of our political system. I quote the following paragraph from Flynn's book:

"One of the main reasons for Willkie's defeat was the lack of support given him by the regular Republican organizations. The organizations certainly did not want him to be nominated. He overwhelmed them in Philadelphia. Unquestionably they left the convention with no kindly spirit toward their candidate. This feeling got worse, aggravated by the fact that Willkie took every opportunity he could to insult directly or indirectly the politicians in the Republican party."

Wendell Willkie could have been elected in 1940. Flynn comes pretty close to admitting that and I am sure that Jim Farley, when his full book appears, will come close to admitting it. Willkie was originally projected by a group of businessmen associated with the National Association of Manufacturers who were seeking someone to out-glamour Roosevelt. Long before the convention, he was invited to address the NAM big dinner at the Waldorf Astoria. They saw a chance of defeating Roosevelt. There was money to burn. I know this situation intimately and directly because I was then associated with the NAM.

The Republican politicians did not want Willkie. There were two reasons: 1. He was not a Republican. He had been a Democrat, actually a member of Tammany Hall; 2. They regarded him as the businessman's lawyer, not as a leader of their party. Flynn is correct but he understates the situation: it is not only that the regular Republican organizations failed to support Willkie; they actually voted against him.

I traveled from one end of the country to the other in that campaign, stumping for the Republican party. I wrote on November 8, 1940:

"I found that Republican leaders and workers were without contact often even with the officers of the party. There was discouragement, resentment and disappointment. A campaign is not a crusade and it is won not by noise in unison but by enthusiastic and coordinated competence. The latter was lacking throughout."

The major political parties of this country are not membership organizations, but they consist of a large body of local workers who are often associated in local clubs. These are controlled by district leaders who, in turn, are controlled by county leaders. The really effective political agents are the county leaders. They make or break candidates. They are strictly organization men. They prefer organization men.

Of the many Republican candidates, three are strictly organization men, Robert A. Taft, Thomas E. Dewey and Joseph Martin, Jr. Stassen is an organization Republican but he is not really a candidate. Eisenhower is a rank outsider, projected by such outsiders as Thomas J. Watson of the International Business Machines Corporation and Joseph E. Davies, Mr. Roosevelt's Mission to Moscow.

Common Causes of Insomnia

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MANY people find it difficult to get a good night's rest. Either they have trouble getting to sleep in the first place, or else after a few hours' slumber they awaken to spend the rest of the night tossing and turning.

Sleeplessness or insomnia is just a symptom. Hence, before much can be done to help the situation, a thorough study by a physician is needed to find the cause. Once the cause is found, the physician is in a position to take the proper measures to correct the condition.

Common Cause

There is little doubt that the most common cause of sleeplessness is worry. It is not always easy to eliminate the cause of worry and it does little good to tell a person to stop worrying when he has something to worry about. Nonetheless, worry—even in a good cause—can become a habit. With cooperation between doctor and patient, it is possible to cultivate a more serene frame of mind in regard to the numberless little anxieties which so many people seem to take to bed with them.

Of course, sleeplessness may be due to a number of simple things, such as keeping the bedroom too warm, not having enough fresh air in the room, or having too many or too few covers on the bed. Overstaying late at night is one of the commonest causes of insomnia in the middle-aged. Sleeping in a room in which mirrors reflect lights into the eyes, or sleeping in surroundings that are noisy, are other factors. Then, too, illness of one type or another may contribute to sleeplessness because these illnesses are accompanied by pain or other symptoms.

Temporary Discomfort

In many instances in which there is temporary nervousness or discomfort, the doctor may suggest the use of sleeping drugs. These drugs, used wisely under the direction of the physician, are an important aid to the patient. They are often used before operations to save the patient from a night of worry and fear.

Just as these drugs can be of great benefit they can be equally harmful when they are abused. In fact, taken too frequently, or in too large amounts, they may be extremely dangerous. It has been found that people who have acquired the habit of taking these preparations often go to sleep just as well when a harmless pill is substituted for the sleeping drug.

So, if you are having trouble getting to sleep, consult your physician. If he thinks sleep-inducing pills are necessary to tide you over, he will prescribe the proper ones in the right dose; otherwise, leave them alone.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

D. L.: Is a fallen bladder a serious condition in a woman of sixty?
Answer: Such a condition, while not serious, is usually responsible for many symptoms. As a rule, operation is necessary.

Play Bridge With BARCLAY

FINEST PLAY AT "I-NO"

YOU will find that the very best players without exception assert that the most efficient play ever seen at a bridge table is usually when the contract is low, especially when it is 1-No Trump. The reason is obvious. When good bidders reach only a very low height, it is because their opponents hold just about as much strength as they do themselves. In such situations, the battle promises to be extremely close, and the size of every card may prove important. In consequence, both the declarer and the defenders have to watch every little thing with extreme care, and make every possible deduction, as the slightest factor may upset the hair-trigger balance.

CHAPTER TWENTY

"MARRY ME, Catherine. I want you to marry me now, at once."

"What . . . ? Oh." Catherine had been miles away. She looked up. Nicky was standing over her chair in the living room of the apartment on Lorillard Place. It was almost seven o'clock. They had just come in.

Cocktails at the bar at which they had stopped after leaving the Sixty-fourth Street house hadn't done any good. Nor the laughing, talking people who had nothing to worry about, against whom no tragedy pressed, who didn't keep asking themselves disagreeable and unanswerable questions.

McKee's guess at her mental state was right. She knew now that Angela had deliberately kept still about the bearer bonds that were missing, that Hat's telephone call to Tom and Francine had been a warning to them to follow her lead. And it was the bonds Francine and Tom had been discussing when she overheard them in the Wardwell living room on the morning of the day Mike died.

Tom had spoken to the Inspector as though the bonds weren't important. He hadn't talked that way then. Nor had Francine. Oh, no. They were hot on the trail of them, wondering where the wretched things could be. Her own name had been mentioned as a possible possessor, and Stephen Darrell's—which meant that the bonds had been stolen a long while ago—Stephen had been in the Pacific for almost two years.

She hadn't said anything to Nicky about it. They weren't his relatives. "Marry you?" She smiled up at him, forcing herself to lighten. "Who said I wasn't going to? I did understand we were engaged. Or am I in error? Out of my way, Captain. I'm going to look in the ice box, you must be starving."

Nicky didn't move and he didn't return her smile. He kept on looking down at her, shoulders squared, hands thrust into his pockets. He was different. Catherine was startled at the change in him. He wasn't a boy any more, laughing and light-hearted and gay; he was a man, resolute, demanding.

He said slowly, "I can see you're pretty upset. . . . No wonder. I want you to marry me at once, as soon as it can be arranged. Why should we wait? Angela Wardwell's right. I hate to think of you being alone here. It isn't safe. You're not going to be alone any longer than I can help. Tomorrow's Monday. We can get a license—and be married on Thursday. It takes three days."

He waited for an answer. Catherine didn't speak at once. Their positions had been abruptly reversed. Until Friday, the day Mike died, it was she who had urged their speedy marriage, Nicky who had held back, because of his poor head, because he was afraid to let her take a chance.

She said uncertainly, "Good heavens, Nicky! I—I don't see how I could get ready that soon. There are a lot of things I have to . . . for one thing, there's the office. I'd have to give Tanner two weeks' notice. And I need clothes. And . . ."

"Catherine . . ."

He was looking at her strangely, a flush on his lean cheeks. He turned away, gazed at a picture on the wall, turned back. "Is it Hat?" he demanded. "Are you still angry with me about her? Because I deceived you—and went out with her the other night? Didn't you believe what I told you . . . ?"

"Of course I believed you. Don't be silly."

"Then . . . ?"

He was sweet and she was very fond of him and she had promised to be his wife. Moreover, she hated herself for that brief moment of weakness with Stephen Darrell last night, and determined that there weren't going to be any more such moments. Anger at her own stupidity, contrition where Nicky was concerned, he hadn't done anything, sent her up out of her chair with a rush.

She put her hands on his elbows. "Darling, I'll marry you whenever you wish."

Nicky was overjoyed. The rigidity, the stiffness went out of him. He took her in his arms and kissed her tenderly. "You won't regret it, Catherine. I promise you won't." He began making plans eagerly. He hadn't told her before, but he had a good chance of a job with Spencer and Wyatt, the proper people. . . . He was to see Spencer in the middle of the week. There was a future in it. Later, they'd get an apartment on the East Side, somewhere in the Sixties, and a car, and join a decent club on Long Island where they could go week ends.

What Catherine really wanted was a house in New England, an old white house with a faience over the door and a big barn and trees. Whenever she thought of her life with Nicky, she thought of it within that frame. There would be horses and dogs and a garden—and later on, children. Nicky was wonderful with children and they adored him, perhaps because there was a good deal of the child still left in him.

She said she'd rather live in the country than in the city and he said they would live anywhere she liked. "The country's great. The birds, and all that . . . And we could swim in summer if we got a place near the sound and near a good golf links."

Neither of them had had anything to eat and when his first transports had subsided, Catherine examined the ice box, but there was nothing in it. She hadn't done her usual ordering on Saturday. So Nicky went around to the delicatessen for food.

He was right, Catherine thought. Being alone wasn't good for her. As soon as he was gone, the shadows came back. It had grown colder, and the rain had changed to sleet. Icy particles tapped at the window whispering, and darkness, made up of innuendos and surmises and doubts, came out of the corners, filling her with a sensation of dread.

She turned on more lamps, emptied ash trays, put fresh wood on the fire, plumped the couch cushions and went determinedly into the kitchen and started to make biscuits.

Physical activity was a relief, an outlet. Flour, salt, baking powder, shortening, milk; she sifted and stirred, rolled out the board, floured it. She was turning out the soft dough when the downstairs bell rang. Nicky had either forgotten his key again or his arms were full. She shook flour from her hands, pressed the button, put the door on the latch and returned to the kitchen. She was using the roller when there was a tap on the door. Frowning, Catherine called "Come," craned her head around the edge of the cabinet—and put the roller down in the middle of the sheet of dough, carefully.

It wasn't Nicky who had come in. It was Hat La Mott.

"Hello, there." Hat saw her and came quickly into the kitchen. Her face flushed from the about brown and whiteness clung to tendrils of her bright hair and lay in the folds of her sheared beaver coat. She was carrying a brown morocco suitcase.

She put the suitcase down and pulled off her gloves. She seemed excited and strung up. "I hope you're not going to kill me for barging in like this, Catherine, but I've got a reason. You'll get a telephone call in a few minutes. It's . . ."

The bell shrilled as she spoke. Completely mystified, Catherine answered the phone. It was Francine. Francine asked if Hat had arrived yet and when Catherine said "She just got here," Francine said "That's all right then. Now you'll have someone with you. Hat will take a weight off Angela's mind, she was worried about your being alone. I'll tell her when she wakes. She's asleep now. Tom gave her a pill. We're going to stay the night here. Have Hat call in the morning."

Catherine said, "I will," and put the receiver slowly back on the hook. Hat, unprompted, had come down here to spend the night with her. Her emotions were mixed. She swung around, to find her cousin staring at her from a few feet away.

Hat was smiling. Her eyes were very bright. She said gleefully, "Foxed her, Francine's altogether too curious," and then she came out with it in a tumbling flood. "Stephen and I are going to be married, tomorrow morning, up in Clearwater. It's all arranged. We have to leave pretty soon. The only way I could think of to get out of the house without a fuss—the only possible way—was to say I was coming down here to stay with you. You don't mind, do you?"

Catherine's fingers curled around the edge of the bookcase. One of her nails broke. Sleet flung itself against the panes, withdrew, came back again.

She released her breath gently, retied the silk bow at her throat. She said calmly, "Mind? I don't. Hat, my dear, but what about Angela? Why do you have to do it like this? Why couldn't you wait . . . ?"

Hat threw her own words, the words she had used to Stephen Darrell about Nicky and herself, back in her teeth.

"Wait? Why should we? We've waited long enough. Two years."

Was there something watchful, feline, in the bright glance, the tucked-in corners of her small full red mouth?

RUSSIAN RECOVERY

RUSSIA is bragging now that she is at a pre-war level of agriculture and industry, and Americans may well congratulate her on that score. We are not much concerned about how far the Russian people go in these respects. If true, it is a good thing that they are getting back on their feet, industrially, agriculturally and otherwise, provided the Russian government doesn't decide that it's necessary to strengthen the military forces at the expense of peaceful recovery.

Americans don't exactly love the Russians, and they spurn their present totalitarian administration. Doubtless they don't love us particularly. But there is no good reason why we can't get along together without scrapping and fussing. There are some signs that the Russians feel somewhat the same way about it, even if the Politburo gang have other ideas.

The Politburo as at present constituted will not last forever. Future members are likely to have better plans for Russia—and more peaceful ones for her relations with the world. But Americans as a nation need to form a clear policy, enunciate it definitely and unmistakably, then stand by it firmly, all of us, of all political parties, with all we've got.

PALESTINE HOPE NOT NEW

The idea of a Jewish state in Palestine is not a modern invention, first formulated in the Balfour Declaration of 1917. Over 150 years ago it occurred to Prince Grigori Potemkin, adviser and secret husband of the Russian empress, Catherine II. When Russia was engaged on one of her innumerable wars with the Turks, Potemkin organized a Jewish battalion, and promised them a national home in Jerusalem when the Turkish empire was destroyed.

The catch was in this condition attached. Russia was quite willing to destroy the Turkish empire, but even when she had the strength to do so, Great Britain and various European powers interfered. So the "Sick Man of Europe," as the Turkish state came to be called, took an unconscionably long time to die; and a Jewish Palestine has had to wait till our day. It might have met fewer difficulties if it could have been brought about in Potemkin's day. For one thing, the nationalistic spirit had not then swept the earth, and the Palestinian Arabs might not have objected to a Jewish state.

Sure, people are funny. There is the friend, for instance, who will stop you right in the middle of an icy road to tell you how much more comfortable Winters are than they used to be.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Congress Marshall Plan O.K. Did Typo Boss Pull a Boner May Hinge on Grecian Crisis Using Chicago for T-H Test?

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Belief is growing in Washington that congressional action on the Marshall Plan may well hinge on the outcome of the fast-developing crisis in Greece.

Foreign policy observers think that congressional foes of the long-range European recovery program will use any adverse developments in Greece to sustain their position that the Marshall program will not achieve its aim of rescuing Europe from its post-war economic and political plight.

There is growing fear in official circles that any sizeable increase in Greek guerrilla influence will place President Truman in the dilemma of either admitting failure in the keystone of his foreign policy—using dollars to fight Communism—or being forced to send troops.

In the opinion of many observers either move might well prove fatal to the president's White House aspirations during this election year.

As the experts see the picture, Communist ascendancy in Greece would give Marshall Plan opponents the effective arguments that United States dollars for European recovery are, in effect, "Operation Rathole."

If Greek developments should swing Mr. Truman around to considering United States armed intervention, then the Henry Wallace faction, GOP non-interventionists, and even conservative elements in the Democratic party undoubtedly would view the move as a long step toward declared armed conflict. They would condemn it roundly in voices uttered separately, but with a single view.

These Days

George E. Sokolsky's

Edward J. Flynn, of the Bronx, produced in his book, "You're the Boss," an outstanding sociological study of American life. No college professor could have written it, because no one of them could have had as intimate a view of the actual operations of our political system. I quote the following paragraph from Flynn's book:

"One of the main reasons for Willkie's defeat was the lack of support given him by the regular Republican organizations. The organizations certainly did not want him to be nominated. He overwhelmed them in Philadelphia. Unquestionably they left the convention with no kindly spirit toward their candidate. This feeling got worse, aggravated by the fact that Willkie took every opportunity he could to insult directly or indirectly the politicians in the Republican party."

Wendell Willkie could have been elected in 1940. Flynn comes pretty close to admitting that and I am sure that Jim Farley, when his full book appears, will come close to admitting it. Willkie was originally projected by a group of businessmen associated with the National Association of Manufacturers who were seeking someone to out-glamour Roosevelt. Long before the convention, he was invited to address the NAM big dinner at the Waldorf Astoria. They saw a chance of defeating Roosevelt. There was money to burn. I know this situation intimately and directly because I was then associated with the NAM.

The Republican politicians did not want Willkie. There were two reasons: 1. He was not a Republican. He had been a Democrat, actually a member of Tammany Hall; 2. They regarded him as the businessman's lawyer, not as a leader of their party. Flynn is correct but he understates the situation: it is not only that the regular Republican organizations failed to support Willkie; they actually voted against him.

I traveled from one end of the country to the other in that campaign, stumping for the Republican party. I wrote on November 8, 1940:

"I found that Republican leaders and workers were without contact often even with the officers of the party. There was discouragement, resentment and disappointment. A campaign is not a crusade and it is won not by noise in unison but by enthusiastic and coordinated competence. The latter was lacking throughout."

The major political parties of this country are not membership organizations, but they consist of a large body of local workers who are often associated in local clubs. These are controlled by district leaders who, in turn, are controlled by county leaders. The really effective political agents are the county leaders. They make or break candidates. They are strictly organization men. They prefer organization men.

Of the many Republican candidates, three are strictly organization men. Robert A. Taft, Thomas E. Dewey and Joseph Martin, Jr. Stassen is an organization Republican but he is not really a candidate. Eisenhower is a rank outsider, projected by such outsiders as Thomas J. Watson of the International Business Machines Corporation and Joseph E. Davies, Mr. Roosevelt's Mission to Moscow.

Common Causes of Insomnia

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MANY people find it difficult to get a good night's rest. Either they have trouble getting to sleep in the first place, or else after a few hours' slumber they awaken to spend the rest of the night tossing and turning.

Sleeplessness or insomnia is just a symptom. Hence, before much can be done to help the situation, a thorough study by a physician is needed to find the cause. Once the cause is found, the physician is in a position to take the proper measures to correct the condition.

Common Cause

There is little doubt that the most common cause of sleeplessness is worry. It is not always easy to eliminate the cause of worry and it does little good to tell a person to stop worrying when he has something to worry about. Nonetheless, worry—even in a good cause—can become a habit. With cooperation between doctor and patient, it is possible to cultivate a more serene frame of mind in regard to the numberless little anxieties which so many people seem to take to bed with them.

Of course, sleeplessness may be due to a number of simple things, such as keeping the bedroom too warm, not having enough fresh air in the room, or having too many or too few covers on the bed. Overeating late at night is one of the commonest causes of insomnia in the middle-aged. Sleeping in a room in which mirrors reflect lights into the eyes, or sleeping in surroundings that are noisy, are other factors. Then, too, illness of one type or another may contribute to sleeplessness because these illnesses are accompanied by pain or other symptoms.

Temporary Discomfort

In many instances in which there is temporary nervousness or discomfort, the doctor may suggest the use of sleeping drugs. These drugs, used wisely under the direction of the physician, are an important aid to the patient. They are often used before operations to save the patient from a night of worry and fear.

Just as these drugs can be of great benefit they can be equally harmful when they are abused. In fact, taken too frequently, or in too large amounts, they may be extremely dangerous. It has been found that people who have acquired the habit of taking these preparations often go to sleep just as well when a harmless pill is substituted for the sleeping drug.

So, if you are having trouble getting to sleep, consult your physician. If he thinks sleep-inducing pills are necessary to tide you over, he will prescribe the proper ones in the right dose; otherwise, leave them alone.

CHAPTER TWENTY

"MARRY me, Catherine. I want you to marry me now, at once."

"What . . . ? Oh."

Catherine had been miles away. She looked up. Nicky was standing over her chair in the living room of the apartment on Lorillard Place. It was almost seven o'clock. They had just come in.

Cocktails at the bar at which they had stopped after leaving the Sixty-fourth Street house hadn't done any good. Nor the laughing, talking people who had nothing to worry about, against whom no tragedy pressed, who didn't keep asking themselves disagreeable and unanswerable questions.

McKee's guess at her mental state was right. She knew now that Angela had deliberately kept still about the bearer bonds that were missing, that Hat's telephone call to Tom and Francine had been a warning to them to follow her lead. And it was the bonds Francine and Tom had been discussing when she overheard them in the Wardwell living room on the morning of the day Mike died.

Tom had spoken to the Inspector as though the bonds weren't important. He hadn't talked that way then. Nor had Francine. Oh, no. They were hot on the trail of them, wondering where the wretched things could be. Her own name had been mentioned as a possible possessor, and Stephen Darrell—when that meant that the bonds had been stolen a long while ago—Stephen had been in the Pacific for almost two years.

She hadn't said anything to Nicky about it. They weren't his relatives. "Marry you?" She smiled up at him, forcing herself to lighten. "Who said I wasn't going to? I did understand we were engaged. Or am I in error? Out of my way, Captain. I'm going to look in the ice box, you must be starving."

Nicky didn't move and he didn't return her smile. He kept on looking down at her, shoulders squared, hands thrust into his pockets. He was—different. Catherine was startled at the change in him. He wasn't a boy any more, laughing and light-hearted and gay; he was a man, resolute, demanding.

He said slowly, "I can see you're pretty upset. . . . No wonder. I want you to marry me at once, as soon as it can be arranged. Why should we wait? Angela Wardwell is right. I hate to think of you being alone here. It isn't safe. You're not going to be alone any longer than I can help. Tomorrow's Monday. We can get a license—and be married on Thursday. It takes three days."

He waited for an answer. Catherine didn't speak at once. Their positions had been abruptly reversed. Until Friday, the day Mike died, it was she who had urged their speedy marriage, Nicky who had held back, because of his poor head, because he was afraid to let her take a chance.

She said uncertainly, "Good heavens, Nicky! I—I don't see how I could get ready that soon. There are a lot of things I have to . . . for one thing, there's the office. I'd have to give Tanner two weeks' notice. And I need clothes. And . . ."

"Catherine . . ."

"Yes?"

He was looking at her strangely, a flush on his lean cheeks. He turned away, gazed at a picture on the wall, turned back. "Is it Hat?" he demanded. "Are you still angry with me about her? Because I deceived you—and went out with her the other night? Didn't you believe what I told you . . . ?"

"Of course I believed you. Don't be silly."

"Then . . . ?"

He was sweet and she was very fond of him and she had promised to be his wife. Moreover, she hated herself for that brief moment of weakness with Stephen Darrell last night, and determined that there weren't going to be any more such moments. Anger at her own stupidity, contrition where Nicky was concerned, he hadn't done anything, sent her up out of her chair with a rush.

She put her hands on his elbows. "Darling, I'll marry you whenever you wish."

Nicky was overjoyed. The rigidity, the stiffness went out of him. He took her in his arms and kissed her tenderly. "You won't regret it, Catherine. I promise you won't . . ."

He began making plans eagerly. He hadn't told her before, but he had a good chance of a job with Spencer and Wyatt, the pro-people people. . . . He was to see Spencer in the middle of the week. There was a future in it. Later, they'd get an apartment on the East Side, somewhere in the Sixties, and a car, and join a decent club on Long Island where they could go week ends.

What Catherine really wanted was a house in New England, an old white house with a fountain over the door and a big barn and trees. Whenever she thought of her life with Nicky, she thought of it within that frame. There would be horses and dogs and a garden—and later on, children. Nicky was wonderful with children and they adored him, perhaps because there was a good deal of the child still left in him.

She said she'd rather live in the country than in the city and he said they would live anywhere she liked. "The country's great. The birds, and all that . . . And we could swim in summer if we got a place near the sound and near a good golf links . . ."

Neither of them had had anything to eat and when his first transports had subsided, Catherine examined the ice box, but there was nothing in it. She hadn't done her usual ordering on Saturday. So Nicky went around to the delicatessen for food.

He was right, Catherine thought. Being alone wasn't good for her. As soon as he was gone, the shadows came back. It had grown colder, and the rain had changed to sleet. icy particles tapped at the window whispering, and darkness, made up of innuendoes and surmises and doubts, came out of the corners, filling her with a sensation of dread.

She turned on more lamps, emptied ash trays, put fresh wood on the fire, plumped the couch cushions and went determinedly into the kitchen and started to make biscuits.

Physical activity was a relief, an outlet. Flour, salt, baking powder, shortening, milk: she sifted and stirred, rolled out the board, floured it. She was turning out

That new look is growing ever more familiar and less exaggerated, as good designers whittle it down to something both becoming and wearable. Gone the dragging hem, the silly and seldom neat shirtwaist; instead, a swirl of skirt cut off at a becoming length, and mated to a well-fitted top all its own. Luxury cottons from Switzerland are beginning to reappear in high style resort wear collections, with new finishes and textures that promise good news ahead for next spring and Summer when these fabrics are expected to be more generally available.

Never go south in the Winter without wool, unless you are headed for an equatorial hotspot . . . and choose lightweight wool or you will be out of luck on your international airborne luggage allowance. Lots of tropical holiday resorts are still unreachable by boat, at least on direct approach without resorting to lengthy cruises or local freighters.

Lovely house robes which grace the after-dark hours of leisure at home are an economic and attractive home necessity. Always flattering, because they borrow something from costume along with current fashion, they also take the wear and tear off pretty daytime frocks which should not be lounged in, and skip the need of changing into a real dinner frock with all the attendant accessory needs.

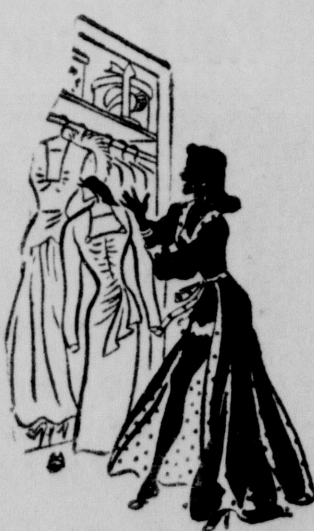

Party season is really the year 'round, and dream dresses usually are so compounded that they, too, know no particular spot on the calendar. If the frock is becoming, it will be as charming in December as it was in May, if you haven't worn it out meanwhile.

WHAT IS COMMUNISM?

School Kids Provoking Thought About Teaching

By KENNETH L. DIXON
ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 23—I came to Albany to make a speech to about 200 parents and teachers of a couple of schools. The school kids represented the offspring of some of our pretty well-heeled citizenry.

After the preliminary part of the program was finished, some of the older of the teenagers remained for the rest of the activities. Then your reporter pontificated on one of his favorite themes, namely:

Why don't we teach the truth, as best we can, about Communism and all these other ideologies in our elementary schools—right along with our instruction on the basic phases of Democracy?

You don't have to hang around Washington long to see why such teaching is necessary. It's perfectly safe to say that the majority of Congressmen can not define Communism, except in extremely general terms.

And before you jump on the congressmen too harshly, ask yourself whether you really understand the purposes, the objective, the weapons and the tactics of Communists.

THEN ASK yourself whether we would dare send soldiers into a war as ill-equipped with military weapons to fight a known enemy as most of our kids are mentally ill-equipped to fight an ideological, economic and political enemy.

In short, how can you fight an enemy until you know exactly what his weaknesses are, and in what fields he shows the most strength?

Well, to get back to the incident at hand, after the pontificating ended, the session was thrown open to a question and answer routine, and what happened was heartening.

Some of the teachers asked how you could convince parents that it was wise to even tamper with discussions of such ideologies as Communism.

Some of the parents wanted to know how you could objectively differentiate between the glorified theory of Communism as it is outlined officially and the actual way it is practiced, over the world today.

Then the kids started shooting—and they kept it up, long after the official program was ended. Here are some of the questions they asked:

1. Aren't world conditions today so critical that there won't be time to wait until our generation, even if properly educated along those lines, gets into government?

In other words, shouldn't a program of adult education be started now on the real meaning of these various ideologies? (You can have that one. It's too flatly-stated for me.)

2. Isn't it true that some of the congressional investigations into Communism actually have served the Communist purpose, unwittingly, by glorifying the party members as martyrs and simultaneously stressing some of the weak points of our own democratic system?

IN SHORT, aren't there quieter, more intelligent methods of fighting the menace? (There was only one answer to that one: Yes.)

3. Aren't we getting too careless with the term "Communist"—that is, tacking it onto a lot of perfectly patriotic liberals who are not Communists at all?

4. Isn't the best method of fighting Communism mostly a matter of stressing the strong points of Democracy and seeking to correct the obvious flaws in our system as it works today?

Here again, the answer to both questions was yes. But the kids continued, obviously thinking as they talked and as they asked questions. And what they said made a lot of sense.

And, underscoring the impact of their probing thought processes and their lack of complacency was the constant realization that these youngsters were the product of a pretty well-to-do segment of this Democratic system of things.

With them growing up, suddenly I'm not quite as worried about the state of the Union as I was.

Movie Group Names Panel

About 25 Pickaway County groups were represented Thursday night at a meeting of a proposed Circleville motion picture council.

After again discussing problems and purposes, the group ordered the naming of a constitution committee. It is composed of Mrs. Sterling Poling, Mrs. Joe Bell and the Rev. Fr. Edward J. Reidy.

The entire group is to meet again Feb. 2 in First Methodist Church.

Imagination Loses In Court

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23—William P. Bigler of suburban Gates Mills had better adjust himself to the smells of a pig farm or else keep his imagination in check.

Bigler was ordered yesterday by Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Julius M. Kovachy to pay $26,500 for a home he had contracted to buy in neighboring Chesterland.

Bigler had sought to annul the contract on the claim that he had agreed to buy the home before he discovered the existence of a pig farm nearby, which was contrary to the "healthful and pleasant" property represented to him.

Judge Kovachy ruled that "if these people living in that locality year in and year out suffered from any such odors, they would be up in arms and eager to make their voices heard." He held Bigler's claims to be based more on imagination than odor.

Stars Promise Unique Year

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23—According to the stars, we're in for a year of confusion, high prices, good business and the possibility that John L. Lewis may be our next President.

At a meeting of the Ohio Astrological Society here last night, Mrs. Nora Forrest of suburban Lakewood declared:

"However, we see a gradual tightening, masses as a whole more careful with their finances in 1948."

She accounted for the Lewis presidential possibility by revealing that the "influence of Uranus is shown by the eccentricity of a third party in a two-party game," she added, however, that "in politics, any guess is as good as another."

Ind., encourages. Jones told a luncheon group of the Ohio Discount League yesterday in Cleveland that increased automobile production might bring about a buyer's market before the end of the year.

The financier told the audience that 500,000 more trucks and passenger cars would be built this year over 1947, largely because of the Taft-Hartley labor law and easier steel conditions.

WHAT IS COMMUNISM?

School Kids Provoking Thought About Teaching

By KENNETH L. DIXON

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 23—I came to Albany to make a speech to about 200 parents and teachers of a couple of schools. The school kids represented the offspring of some of our pretty well-heeled citizenry.

After the preliminary part of the program was finished, some of the older of the teenagers remained for the rest of the activities. Then your reporter pontificated on one of his favorite themes, namely:

Why don't we teach the truth, as best we can, about Communism and all these other ideologies in our elementary schools—right along with our instruction on the basic phases of Democracy?

You don't have to hang around Washington long to see why such teaching is necessary. It's perfectly safe to say that the majority of Congressmen can not define Communism, except in extremely general terms.

And before you jump on the congressmen too harshly, ask yourself whether you really understand the purposes, the objective, the weapons and the tactics of Communists.

THEN ASK yourself whether we would dare send soldiers into a war as ill-equipped with military weapons to fight a known enemy as most of our kids are mentally ill-equipped to fight an ideological, economic and political enemy.

In short, how can you fight an enemy until you know exactly what his weaknesses are, and in what fields he shows the most strength?

Well, to get back to the incident at hand, after the pontificating ended, the session was thrown open to a question and answer routine, and what happened was heartening.

Some of the teachers asked how you could convince parents that it was wise to even tamper with discussions of such ideologies as Communism.

Some of the parents wanted to know how you could objectively differentiate between the glorified theory of Communism as it is outlined officially and the actual way it is practiced, over the world today.

Then the kids started shooting—and they kept it up, long after the official program was ended. Here are some of the questions they asked:

1. Aren't world conditions today so critical that there won't be time to wait until our generation, even if properly educated along those lines, gets into government?

In other words, shouldn't a program of adult education be started now on the real meaning of these various ideologies? (You can have that one. It's too flatly-stated for me.)

2. Isn't it true that some of the congressional investigations into Communism actually have served the Communist purpose, unwittingly, by glorifying the party members as martyrs and simultaneously stressing some of the weak points of our own democratic system?

IN SHORT, aren't there quieter, more intelligent methods of fighting the menace? (There was only one answer to that one: Yes.)

3. Aren't we getting too careless with the term "Communist"—that is, tacking it onto a lot of perfectly patriotic liberals who are not Communists at all?

4. Isn't the best method of fighting Communism mostly a matter of stressing the strong points of Democracy and seeking to correct the obvious flaws in our system as it works today?

Here again, the answer to both questions was yes. But the kids continued, obviously thinking as they talked and as they asked questions. And what they said made a lot of sense.

And, underscoring the impact of their probing thought processes and their lack of complacency was the constant realization that these youngsters were the product of a pretty well-to-do segment of this Democratic system of things.

With them growing up, suddenly I'm not quite as worried about the state of the Union as I was.

Movie Group Names Panel

About 25 Pickaway County groups were represented Thursday night at a meeting of a proposed Circleville motion picture council.

After again discussing problems and purposes, the group ordered the naming of a constitution committee. It is composed of Mrs. Sterling Poling, Mrs. Joe Bell and the Rev. Fr. Edward J. Reidy.

The entire group is to meet again Feb. 2 in First Methodist Church.

Imagination Loses In Court

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23—William P. Bigler of suburban Gates Mills had better adjust himself to the smells of a pig farm or else keep his imagination in check.

Bigler was ordered yesterday by Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Julius M. Kovachy to pay $26,500 for a home he had contracted to buy in neighboring Chesterland.

Bigler had sought to annul the contract on the claim that he had agreed to buy the home before he discovered the existence of a pig farm nearby, which was contrary to the "healthful and pleasant" property represented to him.

Judge Kovachy ruled that "if these people living in that locality year in and year out suffered from any such odors, they would be up in arms and eager to make their voices heard." He held Bigler's claims to be based more on imagination than odor.

MARCH OF DIMES Poster Boy Terry Tullios of Laurel, Miss., who won a bout with infantile paralysis, goes into another bout with Fighter Gus Lesnevich in New York, where Terry received Mayor William O'Dwyer's official welcome to the city.

Stars Promise Unique Year

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23—According to the stars, we're in for a year of confusion, high prices, good business and the possibility that John L. Lewis may be our next President.

At a meeting of the Ohio Astrological Society here last night, Mrs. Nora Forrest of suburban Lakewood declared:

"However, we see a gradual tightening, masses as a whole more careful with their finances in 1948."

She accounted for the Lewis presidential possibility by revealing that the "influence of Uranus is shown by the eccentricity of a third party in a two-party sign," she added, however, that "in politics, any guess is as good as another."

Legion '5' Wins Polio Benefit Tilt

Greenfield Quint Loses, 43-39

The Circleville American Legion basketball quintet avenged itself on the Greenfield Independents, who had shelacked them 45-49 earlier in the season, by downing the visitors 43-39 Thursday in a March of Dimes benefit game held on Roll-n-Bowl court.

Both teams were off in their shooting, but Circleville's fast floor play brought victory.

Eldon Newell, center for the Independents, was high man Thursday, hitting the hoop for 17 points, closely trailed by Big Bill Weller of Circleville who marked up 16.

Circleville's Boy's Club team whipped a junior team from South Bloomfield in the preliminary struggle 18-14, victory coming in an overtime period.

The South Bloomfield youngsters led Ed Ames's lads all the way until the fourth period, when the local youngsters tied the ball game up at 14 all.

GARRY BROWN broke the tie shortly after the overtime tilt started with a hook shot, and Cecil Sowers dropped in the clincher from beyond the free throw line.

High scorer for the game was Sowers with 10 points. South Bloomfield's Wilson followed with eight points.

The game's receipts totaled $26.65, all of which will be given into the local March of Dimes drive.

Larned, Fry Get Tennis Togas

CHICAGO, Jan. 23 — Gardner Larned of Chicago and Shirley Fry of Akron today head the 1948 men's and women's singles rankings issued by the Western Lawn Tennis Association.

Rated second in the men's division is Fred Kovaleski of Hamtramck, Mich., while Nancy Corbett of Chicago is considered runner-up to Miss Fry.

MacMitchell's Old Legs May Get Outrun In Inquirer Mile Event

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 23 — Les MacMitchell and a field of the best that hand can pick will meet tonight in the Philadelphia Inquirer Mile, first of the pre-Olympic brushes presumably building up to an American 1,500-meter victory at London this mid-Summer.

However, the last American victory in the Olympiad's "metric mile" happened all the way back there in that very quaint 1908. So we're a little like Longfellow when he was looking high and low for Evangeline. It's taking us a long time to catch up.

MacMitchell, the Inquirer 1945-46 trophy-defender tonight, was faster than a wink for the 1940 Olympics but, unfortunately, the meet had to be called off on account of the fox-holes.

Since then, he fought a war, took a bride, became a parent and doubtless is the better for it, except for one thing. He just can't run fast enough any more.

AND SO IT may be that national and IC-4A Champion Gerry Karver or the neo-headliner, Browning Ross, will prove to have too much "leg" for MacMitchell tonight.

Rounding out the better element in the special mile are North Carolina's Jack Milne, NCAA cross-country champion; Tarver Perkins of Illinois; and Ex-National Mile Champions Bill Hulse and Tommy Quinn.

The latter is just a good journeyman miller whom MacMitchell licked at the tape for the Metropolitan title last week in 4:18 9-10—fair time for a bad drill-floor surfacing. There happens, however, to be a gent or two in competition who'll beat a 4:18 with one leg in a cast.

Gil Dodds, America's No. 1 miller and tonight's most conspicuous absentee, is definitely a gent like that. He either runs 4:10, or they send out for another watch.

As for that Ross guy, he flat-floored a recent mile at Washington in 4:13 7-10 only two hours after he arrived by automobile from New Orleans, indicating he likes the boards.

WESTERVILLE, on the other hand, seems to have a rather rough crew, beating such teams as Granville by a 58-39 score and Gahana Lincoln 46-39.

Circleville reserves will be hard put to edge their Friday night guests, who have trampled Granville, 47-21; Gahana Lincoln, 47-16, and Dublin's juniors, 53-19.

The Circleville reserves have done well for themselves this year, losing only two of their games in nine tries including all four of their South Central League tilts.

The Westerville juniors appear to have a high-scoring team, but if the Tiger reserves can put on the defensive show they have displayed in previous games, the odds may be evened in Friday's fray.

The reserves are slated to take the floor at 7 p. m. with the varsities reaching for the toss-up at 8.

Westerville '5' Booked For Battle Locals Out After Fourth Victory Westerville Wildcat basketball team will pay its first visit to the Circleville Tigers in 11 years when it invades the Roll-n-Bowl court Friday night.

The last game in which the teams played was in the old CAC gym Jan. 27, 1937, when both teams were participating in Central Buckeye League competition. Circleville joined the South Central league that year, ending the traditional encounters.

Incidentally, the Wildcats took the last tilt by a 26-15 score.

The Tigers will be hunting for their fourth win out of 10 starts so far this season when they meet the Wildcats.

The Tigers have been allergic to making foul shots in their last few encounters, foul shots which, if made, could have turned defeat into victory.

MONROE IS FAVORED Junior High Tournament Set To Open Saturday Pickaway County's junior high school basketball tournament is slated to start 12:30 p. m. Saturday in the Jackson township high school gym, located at Fox Postoffice.

The Monroe and Deercreek juniors share the billing for the initial tilt of the tournery. Monroe, having won all its games this year, is reportedly the strongest team in the tournament.

Mikan Nearing New Pro Mark CHICAGO, Jan. 23 — Lanky George Mikan of the Minneapolis Lakers is in position today to set a new scoring record in the National Basketball League.

The former Depaul university All-America tied the all-time National League record last night by scoring 23 points as the Lakers whipped the Rochester Royals, 69 to 64, before 6,619 fans at Chicago Stadium.

Mikan's 632 total for the season equals the record set last year by Al Cervi of Rochester. However, Mikan scored the 632 points in 31 games whereas Cervi's total was compiled in 44 games.

In third place with a 156 score was Mary Moezel of Portland, Ore., who added a second round 75 to her first round 81.

Legion '5' Wins Polio Benefit Tilt

Greenfield Quint Loses, 43-39

The Circleville American Legion basketball quintet avenged itself on the Greenfield Independents, who had shelved them 43-49 earlier in the season, by downing the visitors 43-39 Thursday in a March of Dimes benefit game held on Roll-n-Bowl court.

Both teams were off in their shooting, but Circleville's fast floor play brought victory.

Eldon Newell, center for the Independents, was high man Thursday, hitting the hoop for 17 points, closely trailed by Big Bill Weller of Circleville who marked up 16.

Circleville's Boy's Club team won South Bloomfield in the preliminary struggle 18-14, victory coming in an overtime period.

The South Bloomfield youngsters led Ed Amey's lads all the way until the fourth period, when the local youngsters tied the ball game up at 14 all.

GARRY BROWN broke the tie shortly after the overtime tilt started with a hook shot, and Cecil Sowers dropped in the clincher from beyond the free throw line.

High scorer for the game was Sowers with 10 points. South Bloomfield's Wilson followed with eight points.

The game's receipts totaled $26.65, all of which will be given into the local March of Dimes drive.

Larned, Fry Get Tennis Togas

CHICAGO, Jan. 23 — Gardner Larned of Chicago and Shirley Fry of Akron today head the 1948 men's and women's singles rankings issued by the Western Lawn Tennis Association.

Rated second in the men's division is Fred Kovaleski of Hamtramck, Mich., while Nancy Corbett of Chicago is considered runner-up to Miss Fry.

MacMitchell's Old Legs May Get Outrun In Inquirer Mile Event

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 23 — Les MacMitchell and a field of the best that hand can pick will meet tonight in the Philadelphia Inquirer Mile, first of the pre-Olympic brushes presumably building up to an American 1,500-meter victory at London this mid-Summer.

However, the last American victory in the Olympiad's "metric mile" happened all the way back there in that very quaint 1908. So we're a little like Longfellow when he was looking high and low for Evangeline. It's taking us a long time to catch up.

MacMitchell, the Inquirer 1945-46 trophy-defender tonight, was faster than a wink for the 1940 Olympics but, unfortunately, the meet had to be called off on account of the fox-holes.

Since then, he fought a war, took a bride, became a parent and doubtless is the better for it, except for one thing. He just can't run fast enough any more.

AND SO IT may be that national and IC-4A Champion Gerry Karver or the neo-headliner, Browning Ross, will prove to have too much "leg" for MacMitchell tonight.

Rounding out the better element in the special mile are North Carolina's Jack Milne, NCAA cross-country champion; Tarver Perkins of Illinois; and Ex-National Mile Champions Bill Hulise and Tommy Quinn.

The latter is just a good journeyman miler whom MacMitchell licked at the tape for the Metropolitan title last week in 4:18 9-10—fair time for a bad drill-floor surfacing. There happens, however, to be a gent or two in competition who'll beat 4:18 with one leg in a cast.

Gil Dadds, America's No. 1 miler and tonight's most conspicuous absentee, is definitely a gent like that. He either runs 4:10, or they send out for another watch.

As for that Ross guy, he flat-footed a recent mile at Washington in 4:13 7-10 only two hours after he arrived by automobile from New Orleans, indicating he likes the boards.

Boxing Bigshots Pondering Who Gets Mike's Job

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—The cauliflower industry had plenty to talk about today in the wake of Mike Jacobs' announcement in Florida that he will retire from the game this Summer after Joe Louis defends his title for what presumably will be the last time.

Jacobs, head of the 20th Century Sporting Club, who has owned Louis' contract since 1935, explained that when Joe announced the Jersey Joe Walcott rematch this Summer would be his last fight "I decided it was time for me to bow out too."

Mike's utterances in Miami Beach had the brothers talking far into the night not alone in New York but in Philadelphia, Chicago, Hollywood and way points.

Main question asked and answered a thousand different ways was: "Who will take over from Mike?"

The answer appeared to rest with Mike himself and few who know the canny boxing promoter doubted he'd have plenty to say, one way or another, in that connection.

There appeared to be little doubt that the man tapped for Mike's toga would need plenty of color and savvy to keep the 20th Century Club and Madison Square Garden its fight headquarters, up there in its top spot in the legalized battery industry.

Westerville '5' Booked For Battle

Locals Out After Fourth Victory

Westerville Wildcat basketball team will pay its first visit to the Circleville Tigers in 11 years when it invades the Roll-n-Bowl court Friday night.

The last game in which the teams played was in the old CAC gym Jan. 27, 1937, when both teams were participating in Central Buckeye League competition. Circleville joined the South Central league that year, ending the traditional encounters.

Incidentally, the Wildcats took the last tilt by a 26-15 score.

The Tigers will be hunting for their fourth win out of 10 starts so far this season when they meet the Wildcats.

The Tigers have been allergic to making foul shots in their last few encounters, foul shots which, if made, could have turned defeat into victory.

WESTERVILLE, on the other hand, seems to have a rather rough crew, beating such teams as Granville by a 38-39 score and Gahana Lincoln 46-39.

Circleville reserves will be hard put to edge their Friday night guests, who have trampled Granville, 47-21; Gahana Lincoln, 47-16, and Dublin's juniors, 53-19.

The Circleville reserves have done well for themselves this year, losing only two of their games in nine tries including all four of their South Central League tilts.

The Westerville juniors appear to have a high-spirited team, but if the Tiger reserves can put on the defensive show they have displayed in previous games, the odds may be evened in Friday's fray.

The reserves are slated to take the floor at 7 p. m. with the varsities reaching for the toss-up at 8.

In Grecian mythology, Clio was one of the nine muses. Clio was at first called the muse of epic poetry; later, and more commonly, she was regarded as the muse of history. In ancient art her common attribute is a partly opened roll.

Yorkshire Fanciers To Organize Breeder Group

Pickaway Men Lead New Unit

Friday Meeting Is Called

The Central Ohio Yorkshire Breeders association will hold its organization meeting at 8 p. m. Friday in Canal Winchester to promote the Yorkshire breed of hogs in Ohio and establish a sales agency for the Canadian type stock.

Election of officers will be held from nine herd representatives, five of which are from Pickaway County. Other breeders will be from Franklin and Fairfield Counties.

Harry Runkle, Ashville Route 1, a leading Yorkshire breeder in this county, said 53 head of the high grade bacon stock was imported last Summer and Fall by members of the association. Sturdiness of the breed was shown, he said, when an average of 11 pigs were saved from each sow.

The Ohio imported Yorkshire hogs were picked from top herds in Ontario, Runkle disclosed. In the local herds are winners from the Canadian National Exhibition held last September and others that placed high in the Canadian Royal Winter show in Toronto.

LEADING breeders in Pickaway County besides Runkle, who owns 35 head of Yorkshires, are the Coon brothers in Ashville with about 40 head and Bruce Stevenson, Circleville Route 2, with 20 head of Yorkshires.

Stevenson recently constructed a new barn and all-steel pens to house his prize hogs.

The Yorkshire "Canadian bacon" hog when slaughtered produces only one-third as much lard as the ordinary breed in this country and brings a higher price on the market.

Because of rigid specifications in Canada, Runkle said, only Classes A and B are recognized.

Although most breeds of swine are represented in Canada, it is now estimated that 92 percent of all hogs there are Yorkshires. This high percentage is an outcrop of rigid requirements for Grade A carcasses.

At the recent International Livestock Exposition in Chicago, the 10 champion barrow carcasses were of the Yorkshire breed.

Panel Orders Man's Dismissal

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—The Civil Service Commission ruled today that Carl C. Tinstman, Pennsylvania deputy secretary of forests and waters, should be discharged for political activity.

A commission decision declared that Tinstman, as deputy secretary of the state health department, violated the Hatch Act during the 1944 presidential election campaign.

The state official was declared to have prepared, signed and circulated campaign literature opposing the reelection of President Roosevelt.

Security Rests With Individual

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23—John T. Flynn, author and economist, holds that economic security is a responsibility of the individual and not the state.

In a talk at the University Club here last night, Flynn asserted that "our only hope is to stop promising jobs for everyone and to start indoctrinating our people in the principle that security rests in each individual."

He added that Fascism, and not Communism, is the great danger in the United States. He urged that aid to Europe be kept "within the limits of reason."

An Early Brood

Give You Lots of Eggs to Sell at the Peak of the Market

GET YOUR BIG PRODUCTION WHEN PRICES ARE BEST

There are excellent opportunities for substantial profits from early chicks. The pullets from these chicks will lay heavily from July on through the Winter. The cockerels go to market when prices are best. The brooding work is out of the way before busy Spring work begins.

Your Government Urges You

To conserve grain by selling your "non-productive" hens and replace with baby chicks. The feed that each "non-productive" hen eats in the next six months will grow three baby pullets to laying age. And the Fall egg supply may be far below the nation's needs. Once again it is patriotic to buy chicks. . . . EARLY CHICKS.

OSU Planning Construction Of Ag Units

COLUMBUS, Jan. 23—Ohio State university college of agriculture plans to build three new buildings this year—two of them west of the Olentangy river on the present university farms.

Dean Leo Rummell of the agricultural college announced the plans last night in Columbus before a banquet of the Ohio nurserymen's association.

He told the nurserymen the first building erected would be a $960,000 agricultural laboratories plant, for the dairy industry and agricultural chemistry.

Rummell said the legislature also had appropriated $800,000 for an addition to the botany and zoology building, and $50,000 for a new dairy barn, which would be located almost at the western extremity of the university's property.

The dean commented: "If the new state fairgrounds is located nearby, it could be fitted into the plan nicely."

Rummell indicated that the move to the west was only the first step in a 25-year plan to expanded agricultural college from the campus proper to the rolling university farms.
